

Call for Papers: Forage and Grazinglands

The first call for papers is announced for Forage and Grazinglands, a new electronic journal dedicated to the communication of information related to forage, range, grazing, and conservation issues and ideas, published by the Plant Management Network (PMN) in cooperation with ASA and CSSA.

Our goal is to provide new, timely, and relevant information to the broad community of forage and grazinglands professionals and practitioners. Forage and Grazinglands is the third journal of the Plant Management Network, built on the model and success of their previous two journals (Plant Health Progress and Crop Management). Using the electronic process, PMN plans to provide a dynamic product, capable of utilizing an array of media, such as color graphics, video, and animation to communicate ideas. The use of electronic reviews and publishing will speed up the review and editorial process, allowing the delivery of information in a timely manner.

For more information, please log onto the website at www.forageandgrazinglands.org. The Plant Management Network is subscriber driven, so please consider subscribing to Forage and Grazinglands, and have unlimited access to all the electronic resources of the PMN.
